William of Rubruck - Wikipedia

WILLIAM OF RUBRUCK, Friar (fl. 1253-1255), a Flemish Franciscan missionary who traveled through the lands that the Mongols had conquered in the Crimea, the Caucasus, Central Asia, and Asia Minor between 1253 and 1255. Apart from references in the Opus Maius of his fellow-Franciscan Roger Bacon (see below), his report to the French king Louis IX, entitled simply the Itinerarium by scholars for the sake of reference, is our only source for his travels.

December 10, 2015. December 10, 2015. ~ DavidMacLean. William of Rubruck was a funny man. But as a Flemish monk sent toward the Mongolian Empire by Louis IX in the year 1253, Rubruck stepped into a violent unknown - hardly comedy. He wrote a lengthy account containing his observations of Mongolian (what he often calls "Tartar") culture and his travels from one major Mongolian leader to the next, ending with a face-to-face meeting with the Great Khan Mongke (Mangu).
